

PROTECT OUR CARE

This Detroit Native, Longtime Political Operative and Trivia Nerd Gets Her Shot on Jeopardy! Tonight

Who is Becky Parks?

Washington, D.C. -- Tonight, Protect Our Care's Research Director, resident trivia nerd, and longtime political operative Rebecca "Becky" Parks will realize a yearslong dream of appearing as a contestant on the classic game show Jeopardy!

Becky is a University of Michigan graduate (and a long-suffering Tigers fan) turned senior political researcher living in Washington, D.C. With nearly two decades of experience at the DNC, Obama for America, American Bridge, and Protect Our Care, Becky will be a formidable opponent.

Becky auditioned for Jeopardy! last fall, was notified in February she had been accepted as a contestant and flew to Los Angeles in March to tape the show with fill-in host, actress and neuroscientist, Mayim Bialik.

In response to her upcoming appearance tonight, Protect Our Care Executive Director Brad Woodhouse released the following statement:

"I've worked with Becky at three stops along the way and always wondered what she was so intently focused on when she had downtime, and now I know: preparing for Jeopardy! Actually, it seems now that perhaps her entire career as a researcher - and she is the best in the business - was an elaborate way to prepare for this very opportunity. Smart, Becky, smart. In any event, we wish Becky well tonight and, regardless of how things turn out, drinks are on her!"

You can watch Becky compete on Jeopardy! tonight at 7:30 PM in the Washington, D.C. area on WJLA and in her native Detroit at 7:30 PM on WDIV. Click here to see when Jeopardy! is shown in your local market.
